Vanuatu

Vanuatu is an independent Commonwealth state in the South Pacific. It has a rich Melanesian culture and heritage. Known as the New Hebrides it was settled during the 19th century by Europeans and jointly administered by the UK and France as a "Condominium" from 1906 until 1980.

Vanuatu is an archipelago spread over 83 islands and the economy is focused on agriculture. Subsistence farming is prevalent and livestock farming is a target for growth. A small light industry sector caters to the local market. Fishing, financial services and tourism are other notable sectors of the national economy.

Vanuatu is a republic, with English, French and Bislama as official languages. A unicameral parliament elects the Prime Minister in regular free and fair elections. Tax revenues derive mainly from VAT, excise and transaction taxes. In 2018, revenues from citizenship-by-investment became the single largest source of revenue for the government and overtook revenues from VAT. The currency is Vatu (VUV) which is freely convertible. There are no capital export restrictions.

Vanuatu is a member of the United Nations (UN), the British Commonwealth, the Pacific Islands Forum (PIF) and the Francophonie among many other international organizations.

Economic Citizenship: Development Support Program

The economic citizenship program "Development Support Program" DSP started in 2017 for the purpose of raising funds to support infrastructure and promoting economic development. Prior to that there have been other citizenship programs already.

Candidates may apply for Vanuatu citizenship by contributions to the government for USD 130'000 for a single applicant and up to USD 180'000 for a family of 4 members. Due diligence and administrative fees are not included.

The citizenship acquired is called "Ni-Vanuatu" and it is hereditary (additional fees apply). Those receiving it have full citizens' rights and the passport is valid for a period of 10 years (renewable upon expiry).

Program Features

Processing time:
2 months

The Vanuatu Financial Intelligence Unit carries out a preliminary verification within only one week after initial documents are submitted (passport, police clearance, CV).

After additional documents are submitted the Citizenship Commission will issue an approval-in-principle letter if the application is approved and the applicant shall transfer the contribution amount to EC Holdings (Vanuatu) Ltd as the local, government-appointed citizenship agent.

Contribution amounts are set in US Dollar, Euro, Australian Dollar and Japanese Yen. The applicant can choose their preference of currency to transfer the funds.
